HOLIDAY CRAFT FAIR

Celebrating Mexico

Mondays 2:30-4:30PM
Beginning November 12, 1990

Fruit Vendor 1951 Olga Costa

As New York City celebrates the artistic, literary, and musical wealth of Mexican culture, WBAI presents a four-part series, Celebrating Mexico.

Beginning at 2:30PM, producers Gonzalo Aburto and Mario Murillo present Celebrating Mexican Literature: The Written Word in Contemporary Mexico. This program features writers Homero Aridjis, Nobel Laureate Octavio Paz, Elena Poniatowska, Marco Antonio Montes de Oca, and Jose Emilio Pacheco, all of whom were part of the 92nd Street Y's Poetry Center series on Mexican literature which took place in October. The authors read from their works (English translations provided) and, in interviews, discuss the state of contemporary Mexico.

At 3:30PM, stay tuned for Mexican Music: A Work of Art. Producers Piera Paine and Cynthia Bell present musical selections from a festival of Renaissance, Baroque, and contemporary music designed by the Mexican Council for Culture and the Arts to coincide with the Mexico: Splendors of Thirty Centuries exhibition at The Metropolitan Museum of Art. Organized by composers Manuel Enriquez, Director of Music at the National Institute of Fine Arts in Mexico , and U.S. Coordinator Joel Thome, this extravaganza includes music ranging from the 16th-18th century Virreinal (Colonial) period to that of some 40 contemporary and cutting edge Mexican composers.

Report to the Listener

by Valerie van Isler

More than forty years ago Lewis Hill, founder of Pacifica Radio, said, "The only thing to do in a crisis is to grow." As many of you know almost too well, WBAI has faced many difficult moments, months, and years in our three decades of historic broadcasting in New York. We entered the 1990s with new hopes and great expectations as we celebrated our rich and wonderful history in radio with retrospectives of our award-winning coverage of civil rights struggles, the Vietnam War, the peace movement, and the U.S. invasion of Panama. Our January marathon was one of the best ever as you, our audience, responded in an unprecedented way to the special reports and programs produced by our staff. And throughout the early spring, there was a growing confidence that this, indeed, would be very good year. The experienced leadership of Rosemarie Reed, the station manager, had pulled WBAI back from the chaos of 1988 and '89, and her dedication to the vision of a growing station and staff was widely known and deeply appreciated. But days are long and hard in community radio where there are never enough resources to do all that you want to do for listeners and the station. These pressures affect everyone, and after some months of thought, Rosemarie resigned in September. Although she has gone on to other important projects in media, this station and this staff will always recognize the tremendous devotion and energy that she brought to BAI. Blessings to you from all of us.

As we move into the new season, WBAI has just completed its Fall Membership Drive "we used to call them marathons" and despite the many problems of the summer, this too was one of our best September campaigns in recent years. Our fiscal year budget has been approved by the Pacifica National board: this year we must raise about $1,560,500 in order to keep your community radio station on the air. It's a critical time for all of us but now, more than ever, we need your support in order to bring you some of the best investigative, political, economic, and cultural reporting on the airwaves and to keep you fully informed about international developments in this time when the world stands poised on the brink of a possible war.

The Decency Dilemma

by John Crigler

The Federal Communications Commission's "indecency" crusade continues. On August 6, 1990, the FCC released a report which concluded that indecent broadcast material should be banned 24 hours a day because some children (those under 17) are awake and tuned in at all times. This report factually supports a statute, sponsored by Senator Jesse Helms, which instructs the FCC to ban indecent broadcast material. Pacifica has joined with the writer's organization P.E.N. American Center in challenging the proposed ban in a federal court of appeals. Briefs for the challengers are due November 5, 1990; briefs for the FCC and those supporting its proposal are due December 15, 1990. Although the appellate court's decision will probably not be issued until early spring, it is almost certain regardless of what it is to be appealed to the Supreme Court.

In and of itself, the prospect of such protracted litigation has an effect on speech. Broadcast stations must either put up huge litigation fees or shut up. For non-commercial stations, this dilemma is particularly painful since the stations must either strain to raise the considerable funds needed to take part in the litigation or silently hope that other interests, such as the commercial broadcast industry, will satisfactorily argue their case.

Although the prospect of litigation stretches for years into the future, the FCC is not sitting idly by. Although it cannot yet ban "indecent" broadcasts around the clock, it can enforce its indecency policy on a 14 hour a day basis (6:00AM-8:00PM). To make its willingness to do so abundantly clear, the FCC issued $10,000 fines against two FM stations immediately after the adoption of its report. In one case, it refused to reduce the amount of the fine even though the station had attempted to garble language which the FCC found offensive.

While the report and ensuing fines leave little doubt that the FCC plans to "get tough" on indecency, neither action sheds much light on the underlying question of what the FCC means by "indecency." The definition is more easily recited than understood. Indecent material is material that "in context, depicts or describes, in terms patently offensive as measured by contemporary community standards for the broadcast medium, sexual or excretory activities or organs." This definition remains elusive. What factors make up the "context" of broadcast material? What are the "contemporary community standards for the broadcast medium"? How do these standards for broadcasting differ from what is acceptable in print or on cable television? What kind of material is offensive to the "average listener"? How does a radio station collect any reliable information on what will offend this mythical national figure? What weight should be given to the artistic or cultural "merit" of a work in determining whether it is "patently" offensive? Does the "average listener" give a hoot about artistic merit?

Larry Carroll

There are no easily understood answers to these questions, but there are easily understood effects: doubt and fear in broadcast stations and program producers. WBAI can no longer be certain it can broadcast readings from James Joyce's Ulysses or Allen Ginsberg's Howl. It cannot know that a rap song or blues tune will not initiate a lengthy and expensive FCC inquiry into the question of whether the music contains "sexual innuendo or double entendre." It must anxiously edit documentaries or dramas about AIDS. It must timidly censor interviews with Frank Zappa or Erica Jong. It must think twice about airing programs intended for the gay or lesbian communities. Tremendous consequences hang on every editorial decision: any error can result in severe fines and a threat to the broadcast license.

You'd love to go to a Greek island but you only have a short vacation. You fear that when you get there it won't be a bit the way Durrell or Miller deseribe it. And by the time you locate the right spot for yourself it will be time to return, or else you'll find the place crowded with people who are there to imitate lobsters by day and hang-out at discos by night. All and all, you might as well have stayed in Coney Island. This year a small group of people sailed from Athens to the island of Lesbos, and stayed in a retreat just outside Molyvos, one of the most beautiful villages in all of Greece. They went to enjoy the atmosphere of the Aegean, but many painted, some received an introduction to the Byzantine world by making icons, and those who did neither remained happy in the company of artists and craftspersons and wrote, meditated, or just relaxed and soaked up the beauty of the idyllic location. They took boat trips to tiny fishing villages and monasteries. Then they moved to the place where the Trojan Horse is said to have been constructed, booked into an A class provincial hotel on the beach, and swam, hiked, or went off to explore the island on their own. Everyone found the food delicious and flew back to Athens confident that they had experienced the real Greece. This was an 18-day trip which cost $1,700 including airfare by KLM and Olympic, all accommodation and local travel, and a workshop in Byzantine painting. We are doing it again next year, at a higher but nonetheless reasonable cost, with other workshops available. The time is early July. The group will be small. Vegetarian diets will be respected. Call (718) 434-5936 for information and dates of a free slide-show concerning the trip, which is being organized by Ann Welch of :30 Palestine Focus: A Look Back at the P.N.C.'s Declaration of Independence. On November 15, 1988 the Palestine National Council declared an independent Palestinian State in the Israeli-occupied territories. In this one hour special, we'll humanize the Israeli-Palestinian conflict and shatter prevalent stereotypes by presenting various aspects of Palestinian life in the West Bank and Gaza as well as in the U.S. Along with a historical perspective of the conflict, producers Jim Carvalho, Mary Cinffitelli, and Yasmiin Adib will portray Jewish, Israeli, and international support to end the occupation through cultural, informational, and often eyewitness accounts.

Celebrating Mexico

Nobel Laureate Octavio Paz.

2:30 Celebrating Mexican Literature: Octavio Paz. Last month Mexican essayist and poet Octavio Paz was awarded the Nobel Prize for Literature. Although the timing of the announcement, which coincided with New York's fourth Latin American Book Fair and the city's ongoing celebration of Mexican art and culture, may have come as a surprise, for many the announcement was long overdue. In this second part of our series on Mexican literature, Paz talks candidly about his life, his poetry, his relations with Chilean poet Pablo Neruda, and the current state of Mexican political affairs. And of course, he reads his poetry. Recorded at the 92nd Street Y; produced by Gonzalo Aburto and Mario Murillo.

3:30 Mexican Music: A Work of Art. Stay tuned as we continue our celebration of Mexican culture through the sounds of Mexico's music. Recorded at concerts around New York, we'll hear a festival of Baroque, Renaissance, and Contemporary Mexican music. Produced by Cynthia Bell and Piera Paine.

Thanksgiving Day Special

1:00 While Thanksgiving is celebrated from "sea to shining sea" by most Americans, native populations continue to see this holiday as a hypocritical insult to their culture and identity. Tune in all afternoon as WBAI airs three special documentaries presenting voices of Native Americans and issues of concern to this country's indigenous populations. Reclaiming the Nations addresses such central concerns as treaty rights, economic issues, religious freedom, and self-determination. Also from the archives is Voices from the Sacred Mountain, the documentary focusing on the sacred land theology connected to Bear Butte, Sacred Mountain in the Black Hills. Although a growing number of sacred lands are embroiled in religious freedom controversies, this program deals not with the controversies but rather with the passionate religious beliefs held by traditional Lakota Sioux people who continue to pray on contested lands in the Black Hills. WBAI concludes its Thanksgiving Day programming with a two-hour documentary on the subjugation of the indigenous peoples of this hemisphere by European invaders. What Thanks Must We Give? airs the voices of various native activists and scholars discussing contradictions in American history and the destruction of their land by the first European settlers. Produced by Sequoyah host Troy Lang, this special features music of the various nations of North America.

(Crigler, conclusion)

The giving of money, in any amount, is an intimate act. Every listener-supported station depends for survival upon maintaining a relationship with listeners which is founded in that intimacy. Into that relationship an 1,800 person bureaucracy has now intruded itself, wagging its finger, clucking its tongue, arching its eyebrow, warning, threatening, fining. The effect is to disrupt the relationship between the station and its listeners and to make the station edgy about almost any controversial programming it airs.

As a result of the FCC's crackdown on "indecency," stations will be less inclined to air works that deal with sensitive adult topics, and listeners will be less likely to receive controversial works of artistic or journalistic merit. The "alternative" that alternative radio stations such as WBAI can offer has become smaller, paler, blander; possibly less "offensive" to the average listener, and almost certainly less interesting to anyone.

John Crigler is a partner in the law firm of Haley, Bader & Potts, which serves as communications counsel to WBAI and other stations licensed to the Pacifica Foundation.

DEAR FOLKS,
I am writing to you to ask that you put Wild Man Steve Brill back on the air. I enjoyed listening to him so much. I miss his very informative talks on wild plants.
Please give him another chance.

Truly yours, C.S.
Clifton, NJ

DEAR MR. PHILLIPS:
WBAI, unknown to me until recently, is a miraculous, heartening assurance that there are actually people out there fighting on the side of people and for what this country was intended to be long, long ago.
My only regret is that it isn't heard nationwide. But I'm taping little bits for my discouraged sister in Colorado, and will alert the few clear-headed people I known in Greenwich, home of far-right vipers.
Keep up the wonderful work and thank you all for being there.

Sincerely yours, Mrs. S.R.P.
Greenwich, CT

DEAR MR. PHILLIPS,
As a contributor to WBAI, I would like Disabled In Action Speaks to come back as a regular feature. Since I am physically disabled myself, I would like to hear disability issues discussed on the station.
I really do think the disabled need a regular forum. We must communicate with each other and at the same time, educate the general public as to what disability is and what it should be. I would like the public to understand that we are part of society as well. We want to live a fulfilling life.
In order to communicate these sentiments, however, we need a regularly scheduled forum on WBAI. I think this program should involve everyone listening. I want it paramount in people's minds that disabled people are human beings, first and foremost! I sincerely hope you will allow us free expression on WBAI.
I also want to say that I enjoy the Talk Back! series. All of the hosts are very interesting. It was this series that got me to contribute. Thank you.

Sincerely, GARY S.

DEAR MR. PHILLIPS:
Your recent fundraising letter trumpeting WBAI's successes reminded me to write about what I think is a failure: the "music" which has replaced useful public programming on Saturday and Sunday afternoons.
This kind of "music" is heard all over my neighborhood without WBAI. It blasts from apartments, monster loudspeakers mounted in cars, ghetto blasters in the subways and in the parks. There being ample outlets for this "music," why must WBAI use its precious resources to add to the din? What do listeners have to do to halt this usurpating of air time and return WBAI to its basic mission of providing truly alternative radio?
"Make your voice heard now" says your letter—but do you think you could hear it over the din?

Very truly yours, HLS
New York

DEAR ARTS DIRECTOR:
Just a quick note to say that I am very much looking forward to listening to your new radio show entitled Art Breaking debuting Oct. 4, with Charlie Finch and Anthony Haden-Guest. Please see this project through. We are now in a time when this sort of "discussion" is needed. I'm referring to the N.E.A.

Thank you. TONY G.

DEAR MR. MURILLO:
You asked for commentary about Mr. Wm. Borman (Morning Show 8-17-90). I was very positively impressed. So much so, in fact, that I would very much like to make the gentleman's acquaintance if he would so consider.
With speakers like him in conjunction with your own fine presentation, you have, whenever schedule permits, a steady listener.

Sincerely, M.S.
Hempstead,NY

DEAR ANDREW PHILLIPS,
I fully agree with your letter but I cannot support a station which supports art only in theory but has so little programming on art, literature, poetry, etc. I joined because I was so impressed by you having a full day of Beckett (Samuel) last year. There are no programs I want to hear except good music once in a while. I come from Sweden where they read poetry daily on the radio, read from novels (beginning to end), and have "radio theatre." I miss that in New York!

Sincerely, A.R.
Long Island City

In the real world ...

✿✿✿ Lee Lowenfish (longtime arts and sports producer) just finished the new edition of his first baseball book, The Imperfect Diamond, to be published in 1991 by Da Capo with a new subtitle, A History of Baseball's Labor Wars.✣✣✣ Piera Paine, (arts producer, including this month's Mexican specials) has some marvelously colored trees and other works on paper on display at Cafe 112 at Broadway and 112th Street. ⅄⅄⅄ Contrary to the stereotype of radio people being the folk rejected by television as "too ugly", Nadine Shaw, (News) was featured in the Amsterdam News as a past (1982) Miss New York in the Miss Black America contest. ✻✻✻ Both Andrew Philips (PD) and Jake Glanz (engineering) are teaching at NYU this semester.
